Historical and philosophical studies

SUMMARY
There are over 5,000 courses to choose from, in subject areas such as:
- history by period
- history by area
- history by topic
- archaeology
- philosophy
- theology and religious studies
- heritage studies

Investigate several courses. Don’t assume that courses with similar names offer students the same content – there are significant differences between them. Where one museum studies course may be focused on fine arts, another might put more emphasis on social history.

Other includes postgraduate diplomas, certificates, and professional qualifications, Postgraduate Certificate in Education (PGCE), level 7 Diploma in Teaching in the Lifelong Learning Sector, higher education provider postgraduate credits, and non-formal postgraduate qualifications.

There are various kinds of postgraduate degrees in archaeology. Some offer courses of study (taught courses), while others are based largely on independent research. Many offer a very specialised introduction to specific aspects of archaeology, while other are quite general in scope. You will need to think carefully about what sort of archaeological career you are interested in and pick courses that cater to your interests.

Historical and philosophical studies continued...

The single most important piece of advice is to think hard about what you would like to do with the range of skills developed during your PhD, which include research, evaluating evidence, writing, teaching, organising, and networking. Academia is not the only option. Ask yourself do you really want to be an academic?*
